Cyber Security and Digital Vulnerability in Society
Dispute series

Biographies

Morgane Bonvallat is project manager at the Public Discourse Foundation. She was in charge for the development of the Stop Hate Speech project at alliance F (umbrella organization of women associations in Switzerland) from 2019 to 2023, where she specialized in online hate and discrimination issues. The project continues to develop under her leadership, now as part of the Public Discourse Foundation and in collaboration with ETH Zurich, to encourage a wide audience to respond to the phenomenon through counter- speech and support affected groups. She is also active in Tech against violence. There, she works on the #withyou platform, which provides easy-to-access tools and information on the various forms of domestic violence and puts those affected in touch with help services. In general, her work focuses on developing digital solutions and raising awareness on violence and is based on collaboration with partners in the field.

Diego Brasioli (Rome, Italy, 1961) is a career diplomat, currently serving as Ambassador of Italy to Luxembourg. Previously, he has worked in various diplomatic posts such as Pakistan, Jordan, Lebanon, USA (Los Angeles), Romania, as well as in the Italian Ministry of Foreign Affairs (President of the Inter-Ministerial Committee for Human Rights, Director for North Africa and the Middle East, Director for Security and Disarmament and Deputy Director General for Political Affairs). Contract professor at LUMSA University of Rome (Italy). Director of the University of Luxembourg Diplomacy Lab.

Stuart Campo is the Senior Data Impact Advisor with IOM's Global Data Institute. He has over fifteen years of experience working in the humanitarian and development sectors, with a focus on the safe, ethical, and effective use of data and digital technology in complex environments. Prior to joining IOM, Stuart served as the Team Lead for Data Responsibility with the OCHA Centre for Humanitarian Data, as a Researcher on Standards and Ethics with the Signal Program on Human Security and Technology at the Harvard Humanitarian Initiative, and in a variety of global and country-level roles related to technology, design, and innovation management with UNICEF. Stuart has worked in over 40 countries, including extended field postings in Kenya, Madagascar, South Sudan, and Uganda. He studied Politics at Princeton University.

Davide Giovannelli, Commander in Italian Navy (OF-4), joined the CCDCOE in August 2021 as Researcher in the Law Branch. He attended the Italian Naval Academy in Livorno and was commissioned with the rank of Ensign in 2004. During the 2020-2021 academic year he attended the 23rd Joint Services Staff Course held by the Joint Services Staff College in Rome. Prior to assuming his current position, Commander Giovannelli served in many areas of military legal counselling. In that framework he worked as Legal Advisor of several operations (NATO Allied Provider and Unified Protector, United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, EU Naval Operation ATALANTA and SOPHIA) as well as within the Navy and Defence General Staff. He has a Master Degree in Law from Pisa University and a LLM from LUISS University.

Solange Ghernaouti, Professor at the University of Lausanne Solange Ghernaouti is an international expert in cybersecurity, cyberdefense and the fight against cybercrime. She holds a Phd in Computer Science. Former auditor of the Institut des Hautes Etudes de Défense Nationale, she is a pioneer of a transdisciplinary and global approach to information technologies and artificial intelligence security related issues. Solange is a regular contributor to national and international media, as well as to UN and governmental agencies and private organizations. She is the author of more that 30 books and 300 scientific publications and popular articles. She is Chevalier de la Légion d'honneur, member of the Swiss Academy of Technical Sciences and of the Swiss Commission for UNESCO.

Giovanna Gnerre Landini, PhD, is an Italian researcher in international human rights law and international humanitarian law. Her research and training activities focus on the multilevel protection (national, regional and international) of vulnerable groups with attention also to the challenges posed by the issue of the interplay between new technologies and the respect of fundamental rights.
She is responsible for the relations with academic institutions, students and associations of UNETCHAC (Universities Network for Children in Armed Conflict). She is a member of the Steering and Scientific Committee of the University of Luxembourg Diplomacy Lab. She cooperates regularly as lecturer, consultant and analyst with several universities and organizations in Italy and abroad.

Adriano Iaria is the Head of Institutional Relations at the Italian Red Cross. He has authored numerous publications in the fields of disarmament, international security, international humanitarian law, and new technologies. Previously, as a Navy Officer, he served at the Italian Defence General Staff, providing legal advice at the International Legal Affairs Office and serving as a Policy Adviser at the Military Policy Division.

Elena Kaiser works as International Relations advisor for the National Cybersecurity Agency of Italy. Previously, she worked as legal and policy advisor for the Cybersecurity Agency of the Ministry of Economy in Luxembourg. During her work, she gained broad experience on international and European cybersecurity matters, including negotiations of international treaties (AHC on cybercrime) and policy processes (OEWG, IGF). She also managed several cybersecurity capacity building and gender inclusion projects. Elena holds a Ph.D. in Public, International and European Law at the University of Milan, carrying out research on the limitations of the right to privacy for law enforcement and national security. Elena is also a qualified attorney in law, specializing in criminal law, fundamental rights protection, and technology related regulations.

Max Lamesch was appointed Director for Humanitarian Affairs in the Luxembourg Ministry of Foreign and European Affairs in August 2021. Prior to his current position, he was Chargé d'affaires at the Embassy of Luxembourg in Ouagadougou covering Burkina Faso and Niger (2016-2019) and head of the Asia department in the Directorate of political affairs of the MFA (2019-2021). Before becoming a diplomat, he worked for several nonprofit organisations and was part of an international rehabilitation team in Haiti from 2010-2012. Max Lamesch holds diplomas in German and English literature and in international relations.

Catherine Lennman holds an LLM degree in European Integration from the Saarland University (Germany) and a lic. iur. from the University of Lausanne (Switzerland). She has been working for the Swiss Federal Data Protection and Information Commissioner (FDPIC) since September 2010. Since 2017, she is Delegate for International Affairs and Francophonie. She represents the FDPIC at several international working groups. Since 2020, she is the president of the Working Group on the Role of Personal Data Protection in International Development Aid, International Humanitarian Aid and Crisis Management set up by the Global Privacy Assembly. She is also the president ad interim of the "AFAPDP", the French-speaking Association of Data Protection Authorities.

Daniela Mahl is a postdoctoral researcher at IKMZ—the Department of Communication and Media Research, University of Zurich. Her research focuses on conspiracy theories and misinformation, the sociocultural implications of digital technologies, and responsible artificial intelligence.

Massimo Marelli is the Head of the Data Protection Office at the ICRC. He is a member of the Advisory Board and a Fellow of the European Centre on Privacy and Cybersecurity at the University of Maastricht, where is he also co-director of their Humanitarian Action Programme. Massimo is also the Editor of the Handbook on Data Protection in Humanitarian Action, soon to be released in its third Edition. Prior to his current role, Massimo held several assignments with the ICRC in the field and at the headquarters. Among the different assignments, he recently established and led the first ICRC Delegation for Cyberspace, in Luxembourg, as a Global Operational Cyber Hub.

Alexandrine Pirlot de Corbion is Directory of Strategy at Privacy International. She manages and oversees the development and delivery of Privacy International's Safeguarding Dignity strategic area. She is also actively involved in designing and implementing human rights advocacy strategies across policy domains at the national, regional, and international level including with PI's global network of partners. She has also been actively involved in PI's work with the development and humanitarian sector with regards to their use of new technologies and data processing activities and the impact they have on them as organisations as well as affected communities. In 2018, she co-authored a report published by the ICRC and PI which explored the risks associated with the use of data and new technologies in the humanitarian sector, "The Humanitarian Metadata Problem: "Doing No Harm" in the Digital Era". She also currently serves as a member of the Advisory Group for the second edition of the "Handbook on Data Protection in Humanitarian Action".Previously, she was engaged in research and advocacy relating to human rights, irregular migration, Security Sector Reform (SSR), gender, conflict management, and human security. Alexandrine graduated from the University of Birmingham with an MSc in Conflict, Security and Development following an LLM in International Law at the University of Westminster following and BA in Law with International Relations from Oxford Brookes University.

Joelle Rizk is the Digital Risks Advisor at the International Committee of the Red Cross. She works on risks to civilian populations emanating from the use of technology in armed conflict settings. Joelle joined the ICRC in 2014 and has taken multiple assignments in Afghanistan, Libya, Tunisia, the Sahel region of Africa, Iraq, Senegal and Jordan. Prior to the ICRC her work evolved around Track II diplomacy and Mediation in Afghanistan and Central Asia. She holds an M.A. in Peace and Conflict Studies and an M.A. in International Relations. She has published various research articles including on non-state armed groups and Trafficking in Persons (2020, 2021), and a book on the geopolitical dimensions of Islamic militancy in Afghanistan (2010).

Tsvetelina van Benthem is a scholar in international law based at the University of Oxford. She is a postdoctoral researcher at the Oxford Institute for Ethics, Law and Armed Conflict and a lecturer in international law for the Diplomatic Studies Programme. She is the co-convenor of the Oxford Transitional Justice Research group and the President of the Bulgarian-registered NGO Centre for International Law 'Erga Omnes', which provides free educational courses for students from Eastern Europe. Tsvetelina is a senior legal adviser at The Reckoning Project, working on accountability for violations of international law committed in the context of the war in Ukraine.

Mauro Vignati has 20 years of experience in several cyber security and cyber threat intelligence positions, he analysed cybersecurity issues from different angles: he worked for the Swiss federal police tackling cyber crime groups, for the Swiss intelligence service countering advanced threat actors, and for the Swiss national cyber security center running bug bounty programs. Since two years he joined the ICRC, focusing on aspects such as the militarization of the digital domain, the cyber cognitive warfare, the role of digital technologies in the total defense approach, assessing risks and impacts for civilians, critical civilian infrastructure and the society as a whole.